

THIRD MAN SOUGHT IN HORST PROBE

CONFESSION CLEARS MANY CRIMES

PAIR ADMITS THREE MURDERS AND TRAIL OF MANY ROBBERIES

Identify Bandit As Cincinnati Bank Robber.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 15.—Oliver Brockman, employee of the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Co., Cincinnati, today identified Charles (Sonny) Hanovich, 22, as one of the bandits who staged a robbery in the Cincinnati bank last November 27 and escaped with $12,000.

Hanovich is the companion of George Williams, 68-year-old quick-triggered desperado, who has already confessed to two murders and 200 hold-ups.

Following his identification, Hanovich came clean with a story of his and Williams' crime trail in Ohio. He described the fatal shooting of Justus Brown, Columbus grocer, and the holdup of a Columbus bank on North High Street. Hanovich was unable to remember the name of the bank but said as he thought it was the North Park Bank.

In thirty pages of confession, telling an almost fiction-like story of crime which left a trail of murders, robberies, and holdups in the middle west, Williams was pictured as one of the most daring desperadoes since the days of Pennsylvania's notorious Paul J. Davis.

Breaking under the steady fire of police grilling, Williams late yesterday confessed the murder of Patrolman Carl A. Sherman here last March 6, the murder of Justus Brown, Columbus grocer, the shooting of a St. Louis policeman, and numerous other crimes in Cincinnati, Wheeling and Minneapolis.

New pages of Williams' criminal biography were expected to be added today when the man will be placed in the "question box" for further grilling. Police declared they will attempt to uncover every crime Williams has executed.

Williams' "break" and subsequent confession came yesterday following his identification by Sgt. Martin Hoffman as the man who shot Patrolman Sherman here. Hoffman also identified Charles (Sonny) Hanovich, 22, as gun-wielder who participated in the gun battle in which Sherman was killed. The two desperadoes were brought here from Chicago where they were captured by Cleveland police.

Just as Paul Jaworski, Pennsylvania's notorious killer, nonchalantly admitted to police that he didn't know how many crimes he had committed, Williams, in his confession candidly told police he had probably participated in more than 200 robberies in the last five years.

The widow of Justus Brown, the Columbus grocer who was shot and killed while arriving in Cleveland today, according to police, to view the men.

Williams' confession also states that he and Hanovich executed two holdups of a collector for the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., in Columbus. In addition to these widespread crimes, the two men are credited with the robberies of two banks here.

FORMER GRID STARS HELD FOR ROBBERY

ASHLAND, Ky., Feb. 15.—Gene Rose of Radnor, Wis., and Joe Kresky of Marinette, Wis., former football stars at the University of Wisconsin, and Peter Abraham, former star of the Chicago Bears football team, were under arrest here today charged with a fur theft at Colon, Mich. They are held for Centerville, Mich., authorities.

Three stolen furs alleged to have been taken were found by police in the rooms of the three.

Rose was a member of the Chicago Cardinals last fall. Kresky played guard with a professional football team here. Both were graduated from Wisconsin last June.

POPE DECRIES IMMODESTY

Launches Crusade for Modesty in Feminine Dress; Enlists Priests in Campaign.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 15.—Pope Pius XI has started a new crusade against "immodesty" of feminine dress throughout the world.

As a result, Catholic bishops throughout the world were today awaiting instructions sent out by the sacred congregation of the Council for the Roman Catholic Church laying down twelve rules to be followed in stamping out this alleged evil.

The instructions stated that parish priests and preachers on given occasions should beseech women to wear modest dresses; that parents should instill modesty of dress in the minds of their daughters and forbid participation in athletic events unless modestly attired; that teachers and heads of schools should similarly influence young girls and forbid admittance to improperly-dressed girls; that women's religious associations should be formed for the same purpose; that immodestly-dressed women should be barred from religious associations, excluded from holy communion and from acting as godmothers; that the council of vigilance in each diocese should take this matter up at least once a year and suggest practical measures; and that bishops should report progress made in their dioceses every three years.

KROGER STORE MANAGER ROBBED BY LONE BANDIT

Daring Daylight Hold-Up Yields $35 In Cash To Gunman Friday; Police Receive Late Report On Robbery

Ted Cleland, manager of the W. Main St. branch of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., walked eight squares to Police Headquarters to report that he was held up about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon by a middle-aged bandit armed with a revolver, who escaped with $35 in cash, part of which was obtained from the cash register and about $18 from a pocketbook belonging to Cleland.

Cleland walked to headquarters to tell his story because there is no telephone in the grocery. Cleland and his wife were alone in the grocery when the man, who was dressed in a dark suit and wore no overcoat, walked in, brandished a revolver and ordered them to hold up their hands. He then proceeded to rifle the cash register.

The bandit forced S. O. Story, a customer who had entered the store, to go to the rear of the grocery and was told to stay there. After removing the contents from the cash register, the hold-up man took Cleland's pocketbook from his pocket and emptied it. He then ran out of the store and the last Cleland saw of him was when he entered an adjoining alley in the direction of Second St.

DAYTON YOUTH DEAD; FIVE OTHERS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Tragedy Ends Trip Of Young People To Junior Prom

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 15.—An 18-year-old Dayton youth is dead, and five other persons are suffering serious injuries here today following an automobile accident which abruptly precluded the attendance of five young people at the annual junior prom of Ohio State University last night.

James H. Hedgcock, the Dayton boy, was almost instantly killed when the automobile which he was driving collided with another machine which was driven by E. E. Jackson, dairy inspector for the state department of health.

Hedgcock and four girls were en route to the prom which was held at the Neil House, local hotel.

The injured persons are: Mary Donovan, 18, of Dayton, head lacerations, sprained back and fractured ribs.

Martha Owens, 18, of Dayton, serious cuts and bruises.

Virginia Perkins, 18, of Dayton, fractured collar bone and fractured wrist.

Mrs. P. J. Bing, of Columbus, scalp lacerations and cuts and bruises.

Patsy Johnson, 17, of Dayton, lacerated scalp and leg injuries.

Immediately after Hedgcock's automobile collided with Jackson's machine, the car in which Mrs. Bing was riding, was struck broadside by Hedgcock's automobile. The third automobile was driven by the injured woman's husband.

Another party of Dayton persons was following Hedgcock's automobile. They were on their way to the prom, also. They took the youth and the four girls who were with him to Mt. Carmel hospital. He died on the operating table.

DRYS TO RETALIATE AGAINST WET FIGHT BY SPEECH PROGRAM

Beedy And Sproul To Defend Liquor Laws In House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Smarting under the constant hammering of anti-prohibition forces, congressional drys today rallied and promised to inaugurate a counter-offensive in the house today.

Rep. Beedy (R) of Maine was selected to take the floor for the drys and not only assail wet claims that drinking is rampant but defend enforcement as effective in a large part of the country.

Another militant dry, Rep. Sproul (R) of Kansas, also planned to take the floor to answer the speech recently made by Rep. Schafer (R) of Wisconsin, who declared the Bible approved moderate drinking.

With Rep. LaGuardia (R) of New York slated to make an answer for the wets, a free-for-all debate was predicted.

The drys generally have been content to remain silent in the face of wet activity in both branches of congress. Beedy, one of the leading prohibition speakers, took the floor recently to defend the coast guard after the killing of rum runners in Long Island Sound.

Rep. Sproul's ire was aroused by the Schafer speech. He announced the title of his own address as: "If Christ were on earth today as he was once in Judea would he be a dry?"

The answer, Sproul says, is emphatically yes.

Sproul may also speak for his proposed amendments to the Wickersham crime commission's bills including his "human padlock" idea.

Meantime both wets and drys were rallying witnesses for the wet bill hearings by the house judiciary committee next week.

The wets have called so many witnesses it is doubtful whether they can complete presentation of their case in the two days allowed.

Walter W. Liggitt, magazine writer, who started the committee with sensational charges on the first day of its hearings, is being challenged from all sides. He will be invited before the committee to defend them.

CHICAGO RACKETEER MURDERED AS CRIME DRIVE IS CONTINUED

BAY STATE WINNER

William J. Granfield of Springfield, Mass., winning an anti-prohibition platform, will be the first Democrat ever to represent the second congressional district of Massachusetts. Victor over Frederick D. Griggs, Republican, with a plurality of 6,500, in a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman W. Kirk Kaynor, Granfield carried every city and large town, including Northampton, home of Calvin Coolidge.

SENATE BEGINNING CAMPAIGN TO ENACT TARIFF BY MARCH 1

Party Leaders Plan Effort To Pass Pending Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Economic policies of the United States Supreme Court having been thoroughly aired, the senate settled down today to enact the administration's long pending tariff bill by March 1.

This was the goal of both Republican and Democratic leaders who have gradually tired of their year-old legislative quest. The program, once the tariff is passed, includes action on Muscle Shoals legislation, passage of the bill transferring the prohibition bureau to the department of justice and enactment of the Coughlin communications bill, placing all radio, telephone, telegraph and cable service under one federal commission.

The program was subject to "change without notice" if the wet and dry wars break out in the senate before its schedule. Administration leaders have become reconciled to a free-for-all battle over prohibition, its enforcement and proposals for its modification, but they hope to postpone it until the middle of March. There was no assurance this postponement would be accepted by wets and drys so the prohibition war may break at any time in the upper branch of congress.

The tariff meanwhile seemed on the way to initial passage by March 1. It will then be sent to conference, with both the house and senate later acting on the conference report. Its final enactment may be delayed until May.

There will be but one break in the tariff debate if administration leaders have their way. This will come next Tuesday when action is taken on confirmation of Hugh M. Tate, of Knoxville, Tenn., as an interstate commerce commissioner.

Senator Black (D) of Ala., will lead the fight against Tate, charging he does not represent the South. His confirmation however is conceded.

This program was presented by Senator Watson (R) of Ind., the majority leader. He was particularly anxious to pass the tariff by March 1.

"There has been no evidence of a filibuster, and all groups have indicated a desire to get the tariff passed and sent to conference," Watson explained.

Killing Punctuates Police Campaign Against Crooks

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Another slaying was added to Chicago's crime record today with the finding of the bullet-riddled body of Tony Lombardo, 25-year-old bootlegging racketeer and underworld character.

Lombardo had been lured or driven into an alley and then slain. He was shot through the head and body with a double-barreled shotgun and a revolver, evidently wielded by two men.

The shotgun was found fifteen feet from the body where it had been tossed when the assassins fled.

Lombardo, police believe, found his alcohol racket too limited and turned to extortion among members of the Italian district to obtain ready money. One of his intended victims "put him on the spot," it is believed.

The slaying of Lombardo punctuated a concerted drive against crime which has been waged relentlessly for the last week.

Over 500 hoodlums, including four gunmen, were captured in yesterday's drive, bringing the total arrested close to 3,000. Forty men in all were found to be carrying guns and face penitentiary sentences as a result.

Police Commissioner William Russell, in addressing the police captains yesterday, gave no word of praise for the cleanup, but issued the command:

"Keep it up and do better. Every hoodlum must be jailed or chased out of the city."

VOLSTEAD CLAIMS EAST IS WETTER

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 15.—The east is a greater violator of prohibition laws than the west, according to Andrew J. Volstead, author of the dry enforcement act.

In an interview with the Daily Princetonian, student publication of Princeton University, Volstead declared "west of Chicago the situation is generally dry."

Volstead said he believed that prohibition enforcement was generally improved. He said there was less drinking among college students now than in 1919.

GOVERNMENT GETS EVIDENCE IN NEW LIQUOR BUYING TEST CASE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The announced intention of the local authorities to test the prohibition law against the purchaser as well as the bootleggers, which failed because of lack of evidence Thursday, may soon be realized.

Police have under arrest today John Weyland, of Clarendon, Va., alleged purchaser, and Myrtle Schools, negress, as the seller. Two policemen declare they saw the sale of a half gallon of "caw" to Weyland by the woman.

QUIZ SUSPECT IN HORST MYSTERY

Believing that they have found the solution to the mystery of the disappearance of Melvin Horst, left, above, four-year-old Orrville, O., boy, missing for more than a year, Orrville authorities have been quizzing Errol Conall, top right, former Wooster, O., brakeman, who has been named by Charles Hanna, of Wooster, O., as the slayer of the boy. Hanna told his story to police after his son, Junior Hanna, left, below, implicated him in the mystery. Conall, who is described by the authorities as a bootlegger, has recalled by accusing Hanna of the murder. On the right, below, is Marshal Roy Horst, uncle of the missing youth, whose activity against bootleggers is believed to have led to the kidnapping as a retaliatory measure.

PEANUT MONEY

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 15.—One day last summer when Nikitas Toskolakis, aged peanut vender, called in Policeman Patrick Walsh and Jeffrey Alexander, two friends, and asked them to witness his will, in which they were the beneficiaries, the two just laughed and let it go at that.

Today they learned the estate was valued at $18,000. How the peanut vender amassed his fortune is a mystery.

ARGENTINE RIOTS AFFECT ELECTION

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 15.—Intense political antagonism between the opposed factions in the campaign for election of national deputies was heightened today following riots in various parts of the country which took a toll of four in dead and eighteen in wounded.

Two were killed and thirteen wounded in the town of Lincoln, near here, when a mob of radicals attempted to break up a conservative political meeting. One death was reported in a similar occurrence in Toledo and a fourth person was killed at San Juan.

Five persons were seriously wounded here last night when a gang of thugs, numbering about 500, broke up a convention of radicals. Mounted police with drawn sabres charged the gangsters only to be met by a fusillade of pistol shots. They had to resort to similar weapons to subdue the troops.

FEDERAL JUDGE GRANTS RELEASE

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 15.—The release of George Hatem, of Somerset, from the Perry County Jail, was expected to be made today following action of Federal Judge Benson W. Hough and the affirmation of his action by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Judge Hough granted Hatem his release on a writ of habeas corpus. Hatem was sentenced to the jail by Justice J. W. Newberry, after the man had been fined $400 for alleged violation of the liquor laws, and was unable to pay the fine.

They claim they saw the man enter the negress' house so they went to a kitchen window and watched. They allege Weyland gave her a five dollar bill. She went up stairs and returned with a jar of the alleged liquor. Then the police entered.

In the previous case the assistant district attorney refused to make a test case because the policeman, the only witness, did not witness the purchase, or capture the seller.

NAVAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES STILL RETAIN OPTIMISM

Remain Hopeful In Spite Of Impasse Caused By France

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Brought to an impasse by France's firm demands for a fleet of 724,475 tons by 1936, the delegates at the London naval conference, now resting during the week-end adjournment, continued optimistic today despite the apparent futility of any hopes that real naval armament reduction will be effected at the present parley.

All the chief delegates feel that even if the present conference does not succeed in reducing the navies of the five great naval powers, it will at least effect definite equilibrium among these fleets which should pave the way for actual reduction at a future conference, possibly in 1935.

As the situation stands now, France's demands for a fleet equal to that of the combined navies of Italy and Germany have brought her figures for minimum tonnage up to a point where Great Britain in order to safeguard her Mediterranean interests may feel compelled to increase her demands.

With Britain and the United States pledged to the principle of parity, this would mean that the United States with a navy at present far inferior to that of Britain in power, would have to enter upon a huge naval building program rather than attempt naval reduction.

In the background stand Japan and Italy, the former demanding a 70 per cent ratio of the American total and the latter parity with France. If France adheres to her demands, the tonnage figures for these two countries automatically would go up. This would mean naval building all around as a direct result of a conference called for the purpose of reducing naval armaments.

However, there are many who still see a loophole. These feel that despite M. Tardieu's refusal to admit it, his figure of 724,475 tons for France was put forth solely for bargaining purposes. They believe he wishes to use it to force a pact for "mutual guarantee and security" among the naval powers.

The American delegates are definitely opposed to such a pact.

All the delegates are now out of London for the week end. Secretary of State Stimson and the other American delegates are now at Stannmore where they will receive the British dominion delegates at luncheon tomorrow.

Premier MacDonald will entertain a party of journalists at the conference at Chateau de la Haye. French delegates went to Paris yesterday. The Italian and Japanese delegates will sojourn in the country.

THINK ACCOMPLICE MAY HAVE DISPOSED OF VICTIM'S BODY

Systematic Search Being Made For Boy's Remains

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 15.—A third man was being sought today in connection with the mysterious disappearance of four-year-old Melvin Horst, of Orrville, who has been missing since the night of December 27, 1928, while Wayne County officials were concentrating their efforts to locate the body of the slain boy.

The angle that a third man might be connected with the little boy's disappearance fourteen months ago, was presented by Special Prosecutor Mougey. He based his belief that a third man may be implicated on the two statements of Earl Conall and Charles Hanna, both of whom stated that they did not know what was done with the body, but each accusing the other of the killing.

Mougey declared that the two men, who are now being held, may have told the truth in their statements in which they said they did not know what was done with the body.

The signed statements of Conall and Hanna, both of which stated that the boy had been killed in a garage on the property of Frank Frye, who Conall lived, are in possession of authorities.

No charges have yet been placed against the two, although charges of child-stealing were prepared yesterday. Prosecutors Marion Graven and Mougey continued their questioning of the two men in the hope of solving Ohio's most notorious mystery, and securing a clue to the whereabouts of the missing boy's body.

Officials are still lacking a motive for the slaying of the little son of Raymond Horst. Meanwhile, charges of murder cannot be placed against anyone until the body is discovered, or its remains are found.

Prosecutor Graven declared that it was his personal opinion that the people of Ohio, as well as all residents of Wayne County, are "tired of child-stealing charges." What is wanted, is the murderer or murderers of Melvin Horst and for their conviction, the prosecutor stated.

The search is being conducted under the systematic directions of officials. The garage in which Melvin is alleged to have been killed was the starting place for the search of the body, the finding of which may solve the mystery and lead to the disclosure of the brutal killing.

The search also extended to Sugar Creek, into which a sewer from the property of Frank Frye empties. A pond near the outskirts of Orrville is being dragged.

Formal charges have not been placed against Hanna and Conall because of an agreement between Willis Horn, Conall's attorney, and the two prosecutors, Graven and Mougey.

"If an attempt is made to remove the men from the county jail by a habeas corpus action, charges will be filed immediately," Graven declared.

Junior, 10-year-old son of Charles Hanna, is under the care of physicians, following his collapse yesterday. The boy collapsed after a long grilling which ended in his confession which implicated his father and Conall.

The boy was expected to be taken to the Wooster Children's Home today and held as a material witness, officials declared.

Junior broke down and chokingly told officials his story and confessed that his testimony in the trial of Elias and Arthur Arnold, which convicted and sent them to prison for child-stealing, was false. They were later retried and acquitted.

SALESMAN HELD ON CHARGE OF ASSAULT

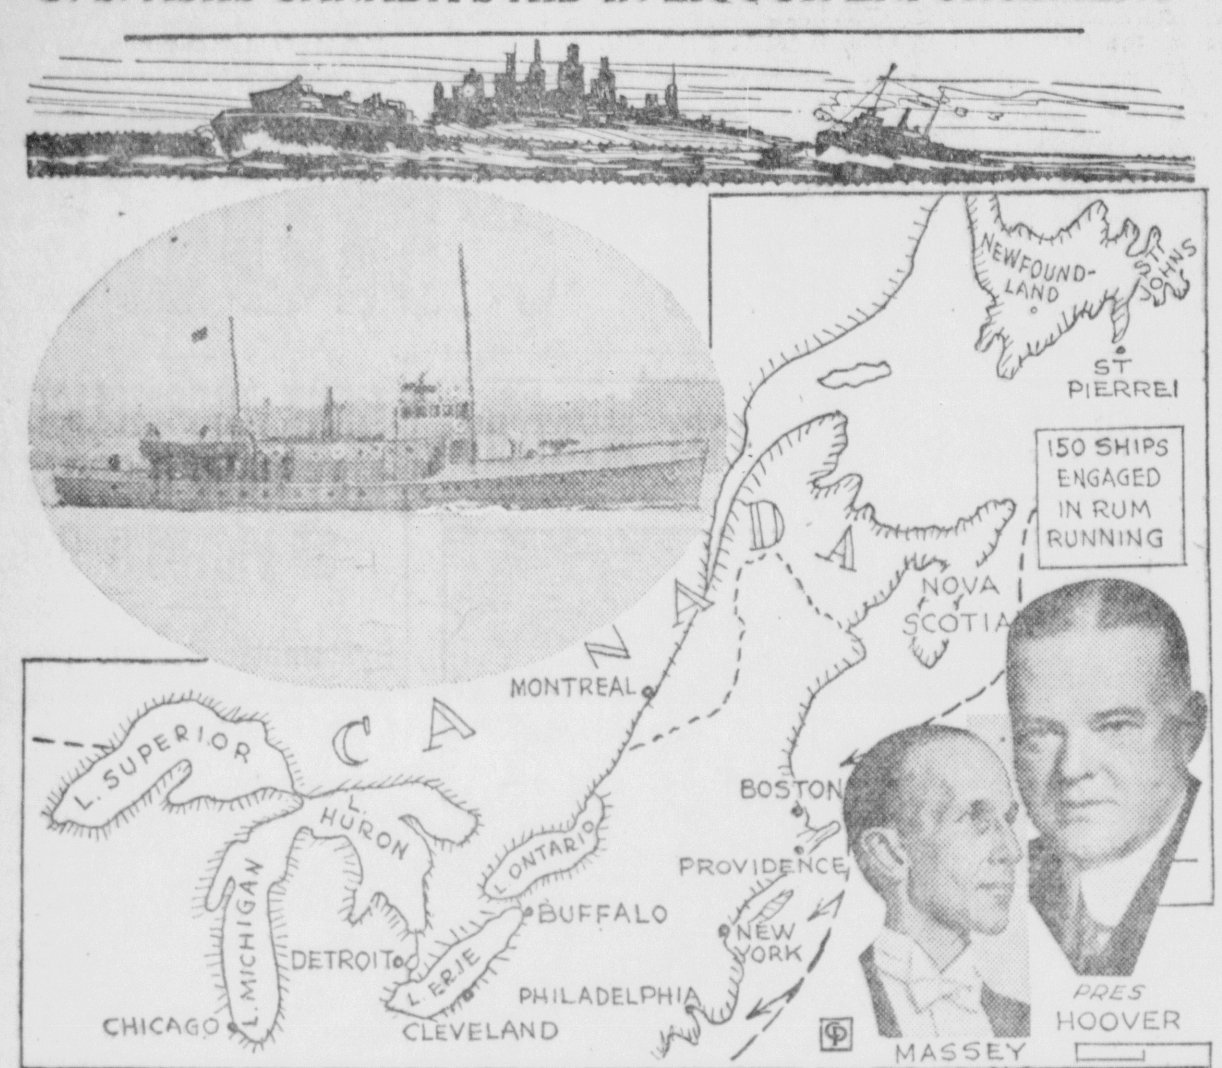

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—On complaint of Miss Jacqueline Swift, attractive 28-year-old Atlanta, Ga., heiress, George Arone, 55, shoe-polish salesman, was under charges of assault today.

Miss Swift came to Washington several months ago to become a model, and met Arone when she responded to an advertisement for a lingerie model. While she was being interviewed as to her qualifications for the job, according to the police, Arone asked her to disrobe. She refused and told the police.

Later a police woman approached for a job as lingerie model. She told him, she said, she would consider his proposition about disrobing. Arone seized her and she knocked him down. Outside the door was a detective. He heard the commotion and arrested the salesman. He charged Arone posed as being afflicted with a well known silk mill and as an expert in lingerie.

Arone was held in $500 bail.

U. S. ASKS CANADA'S AID IN LIQUOR ENFORCEMENT

Proposing to increase the number of ports of entry on the U. S.-Canadian border from 100 to 600, and generally tightening the customs watch on liquor smugglers, dry officials at Washington are seeking co-operation of the Canadian government in checking the rum flow across the border. Vincent Massey, Canadian minister at the capital, has discussed the matter with treasury officials, and President Hoover has asked congress to appropriate $302,000 for 30 fast boats to combat the smuggling along the New England coast, where, according to dry navy admission, there are 150 boats engaged in rum running. Layout above shows map of the territory affected, a typical rum chaser, President Hoover and Vincent Massey.

CARPENTERS HERE STRIKE FOR WAGE RAISE; LEAVE KRESGE JOB

Because of refusal of the Lehigh Construction Co., Newport, Ky., which has the contract for building the new business building under construction on S. Detroit St. for the S. S. Kresge Co., to pay a wage scale of $1 an hour, eight union carpenters on the job walked off the premises Friday and announced they were on a strike.

Alva Mustard, this city, secretary of Local No. 2408 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, declared Saturday the Newport firm had been notified two weeks ago that the wage scale for carpenters in Xenia is $1 an hour. He said that the company had been paying only eighty cents an hour.

The contractors, Mustard said, were given until Friday to decide whether they would pay the union scale.

The notification of the wage scale was given officials of the company by the Miami Valley Carpenters District Council, a subsidiary organization in this territory of the national union.

CONTINUE PROBE INTO DEATH OF INFANT; BODY IS ORDERED HELD

Pending a thorough investigation of the apparent infanticide in an effort to learn the parentage of the child or identity of persons responsible for its death, county authorities have ordered that the body of a newly-born white infant, murdered and abandoned in a thicket on the farm of Mrs. Tobias, Clifton and Wilberforce Pike, a mile east of Clifton, be held indefinitely. The discovery of the body was made early Friday by William Bond, a farm laborer, while on his way to chop wood on the farm.

That the baby had lived for some time after birth and that it was strangled and choked to death where it was found is the opinion of Coroner R. L. Haines and physicians who conducted an autopsy. Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall, who with Sheriff Ohmer Tate, visited the spot where the body was found Friday afternoon, coincides in this theory, which was indicated by a blood on the ground and by twisted strips of cloth near the body which it is believed were used to strangle the infant. A piece of bath towel and a bit of silk, evidently the lining from a woman's hat, were used.

The condition of the body and ground leads authorities to believe the infant was murdered Thursday night and that it could not have been there during the heavy rains of the preceding night.

The body was of a fully developed white girl and was nude. It is being held at the R. M. Need undertaking establishment.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Lord my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: neither do I exercise myself in great matters, or in things too high for me.—Psalm cxxxi, 1.

SLURRING REMARKS

Some of the American correspondents attending the London navy conference seem to take delight in making remarks of a slurring and suspicion-breeding nature regarding the program and objects of the British hosts. At least one of them has a confirmed tendency to portray the gathering as a game at which all the participants are trying to overreach one another; and in commenting on Mr. Stimson's statement regarding the reductions the United States is willing to make in its fleet program, he undertakes to draw a picture of the British in a state of unholy glee over the way in which the American secretary, "holding four aces," threw them away before the game began.

Such comment has no foundation and no justification in fact, and can be born only of nasty desire to stir up distrust and dissension between the two great English speaking nations, and to do so even if the whole navy reduction program must be sacrificed in consequence and peace itself endangered. Some of the stuff of this sort that is coming from London is almost criminal, beside being utterly false.

From the beginning, the MacDonald government has been frank, friendly and honorable in dealing with the United States, and has shown itself quite as reasonable as a government with a sense of responsibility to its own people can be in dealing with representatives of a foreign government. The American delegation on its side has shown itself competent to guard the vital interests and welfare of the United States. Mr. Stimson gave away nothing. His offer to Great Britain was conditioned on a move of a reciprocal nature from the other side, which was, as a matter of fact, more or less forthcoming.

ILLUMINATING FIGURES

The comparative armament figures quoted by Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, are illuminating for those who have any doubt regarding the location of the world's focal point of militarism, but they must be analyzed some before their full significance appears. According to the chancellor, the world as a whole spends $4,500,000,000 annually for armaments, of which 60 per cent is contributed by Europe, 20 per cent by the United States, and 20 per cent by the remainder of the world. Europe, whose temper and practices are what oblige this country to maintain defense forces in excess of those necessary for pure police work, makes an annual monetary outlay three times as great as the United States does, a point the racists who consider America their great mission field will do well to keep in mind, if they really are anxious to accomplish something in the way of general disarmament.

But that is only a part of the story. Simple comparison of monetary expenditures in the old world and in the new has some meaning, yet it also is misleading. If we take into account the relative costs of keeping up military and naval forces of equal size; consider in particular the expense of the maintenance and equipment of personnel, man for man, and the differences between the prices paid for material by the United States and by old world lands, the disparity in the direction of general preparedness becomes very much greater than appears from Mr. Snowden's figures. It is likely that on such a basis the United States should be credited (or charged) with a not greater than 10 per cent contribution to world war preparation.

The point is being lost sight of these days, still it is rather important to consider what would probably happen to the Moros if the Philippines should be given independence, this country being bound as a matter of honor to protect them from their good neighbors, the Filipinos.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

AN ORDERLY LIFE

When Edward Bok was 56 he retired from active business. He said he wanted to be an unofficial public servant and give the rest of his years to doing things for human welfare. Few men have been so successful and have carried out their lives in such orderly fashion. Bok lived ten years after he retired, and spent time and money generously for the public good. Men who have programs like this ought to retire early. Those who do not have intelligent programs may do better to stay on the routine job.

Bok, a poor boy and an immigrant, furnishes an almost perfect example of what a young man can do for himself in this republic if he keeps awake.

THE SMALL TOWN

We are always newly amazed by the wonders of great cities. With populations reaching the millions, skyscrapers, electric power and all the wonders of metropolitan life, one thinks of the city as the last word in present civilization. The fact is that this is the day of the small town. Rural areas are coming into their own. The village is making a successful bid for industry. The drift from the small towns to the cities is not so great. The pendulum is swinging back.

WHERE LIVING IS PLEASANTEST

It takes the editor of a small paper to paint the brightest picture of the "back to rural America" movement. Hear the Longview (Wash.) Daily News:

"Not long ago the nation was stirred by the drift of population away from farms and rural areas into the great cities. Young men, attracted by the high wages paid by industry and what appeared to be the superior social and economic advantages of urban life, deserted the soil for the city.

"In the past quarter century rural America has made tremendous progress. Better schools, good roads, the automobile, telephone and radio have created a rural civilization greater than any in history.

"Industrialists, attracted by such factors as lack of labor difficulties, low taxes and uncongested, pleasant living and working conditions, were barred from entry into the small town only because of lack of power.

"Now, according to authorities, the smaller towns are on the road to industrial leadership of America and the countryside is staged for the next scene of our industrial progress. The drift of population has turned. At present the only pronounced gain in industrial wage earners is taking place in the country."

PREACHERS AND BELIEFS

Many ministers think that what they believe, their theology, and their creed are about all that matter. The fact is, the more important things are what the folks in the pew believe and how the preacher can influence their behavior.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

"Is France friendly to disarmament?" asks a Question Box reader.

France favors it, as economical; but is afraid. Consequently, before disarming, she wants countries like England and America to promise to help her if she is attacked. They hesitate to do so, blindly. The result is something of a deadlock.

Waiting for Money

When will construction of Boulder dam begin, how many men will be employed and how long will the work take?

It all depends on the congressional appropriation of funds. The dam is approved but the money to build it is not yet provided. When congress does act, it remains to be seen whether it will make an ample allowance to rush operations or finance them gradually, stringing it out for a long time.

Proportional Representation

What is proportional party representation?

Suppose there are two parties. One is 2,000,000 strong; the other only 1,000,000. On a straight vote, the former will have all the representation; the latter none. But suppose a system by which the stronger party has only two-thirds of the representatives; the other, one-third. This would be proportional representation.

Rhode Island, Etc.

What is the meaning of the legend, "State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," on the state of Rhode Island's official stationery?

Rhode Island, site of the city of Newport, originally was called the "State of Rhode Island." Providence, on the opposite side of Narragansett Bay, originally was known as "Providence Plantations." When the two joined, at an early date, the combination assumed the title of the "State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," which is officially correct yet.

Republican Turkey

What is Turkey's present political status?

Turkey is an independent republic under the presidency (virtually a dictatorship) of Mustafa Kemal Pasha Ghazi.

German Reparations

What is the Dawes plan?

The Dawes plan (named after Charles G. Dawes) was an arrangement to enable Germany to begin paying her war indemnities without crushing her. It was temporary and has given way to a substitute scheme devised by Owen D. Young, establishing an international bank as a clearing house for these obligations. Such heavy payments affect the whole world's finances and the machinery to prevent them from causing trouble is very intricate.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Mel Nan-Fang, the Chinese Barrymore, hit town the other day to begin an engagement at the 49th Street theater. His routine of Oriental Shit Destroyers includes Signor Chang Chia-Shu, and Brother Che May Chen-Hwang of the Bank of China.

We strongly recommend to other visiting thespians the procedure of this celestial barnstormer: Bring your own bankers and play safe.

MRS. FISKE

Brethren, you can't serve two masters. If you set out to please your pastor, you'll find before you are finished that you've disgusted your banker. You have to weigh the advantages offered by either side, make a decision and stick to it.

Look at our own Minnie Maddern Fiske. Minnie's been treading the Upper Levels of Show Land so long that it comes as an unpleasant surprise to find her, along toward the end, making obeisance to expediency, hauling down her colors and trying to qualify along the humdrum level of the commonplace.

Mrs. Fiske has become what old Ed. Howe calls "Broadway-minded." After a tour of razzes she's opening up on Mazda Lane with one of those things called "It's a Grand Life."

ERVINE "LIKES" NEW YORK

"Sinjin" Ervine, British dramatist and critic, who spent a season in New York rubbing the Algonquin Back Scratchers the wrong way, has written a book called "I Liked New York."

In it he tells of some of the rough stuff The Boys pulled on him while he was here. "I was solicited to be invited to 'get the hell out of this country' if I didn't like it and was told that I was 'a lousy Englishman'—which is not quite true, for I am an Ulsterman."

It seems too, that he threw a small but intense religious society into a frenzy of emotion by announcing that the Marx Brothers were not so funny as they imagined themselves to be.

The trouble with "Sinjin" is he didn't learn, till after he got back home, that it never pays to engage in polemics with a polecat.

THEY MAY SHOOT THEIR PRESIDENTS IN MEXICO, BUT THEY NEVER TREAT 'EM LIKE THIS

OUR NEW CHIEF JUSTICE

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—President Hoover generally takes his time about it, when he has an important appointment to make.

For instance, he delayed so long in awarding the war portfolio, after Secretary Good's death, that a whole edition of the congressional directory went to press and continued in circulation for weeks, with that cabinet post referred to, in it, as "vacant."

But the president certainly allowed not much of an interval to elapse, following Chief Justice Taft's resignation, before naming his successor.

The announcement of Justice Taft's retirement and the announcement of the presidential choice of Charles Evans Hughes to follow him, at the head of the federal supreme bench, appeared simultaneously with the newspapers.

To be sure, the Taft resignation probably did not take Mr. Hoover as much by surprise as it did most other folk. Presumably he had been furnished with inside information concerning the real state of the 73-year-old chief justice's health, which few had realized was so badly broken; was aware of the likelihood that his place would have to be filled on short notice, and had definitely made up his mind how to fill it.

Nevertheless, the unusual promptness marks presidential decisions when it is foreseen that speculation may be more or less embarrassing.

Illustratively, the situation might have been slightly strained if, after the tidings of a supreme court vacancy had been broadcast, ex-President Coolidge had been strongly urged for the position—assuming, of course that President Hoover did not care to appoint him to it—as he evidently did not, or at least he would have offered it to him.

Indeed, only a few weeks ago the hint was floating about Washington that the supreme court would be an extremely appropriate place for the Massachusetts ex-president—especially the chief justice's seat.

However, it was a hint which apparently did not reach the White House. It did not "take," anyway.

No one has had any very violent fault to find with President Hoover's selection of Charles Evans Hughes. The latter's corporation affiliations, of a legal sort, since his retirement from the secretaryship of state, have been referred to by Senator Borah and various others as a trifling unfortunate, but these criticisms have not been venomous.

All the same, liberal sentiment lacks enthusiasm.

There is no question that congressional liberals regard Charles Evans Hughes as an ultra-conservative. They consider him a brainy man—not a bad appointee. It is not so much Hughes (who is no more conservative than ex-Chief Justice Taft, at all events) that discourages the liberals, as it is the energy with which the president picked him.

The interpretation which the liberals place on the manner (rather than the fact) of the Hughes appointment is that Mr. Hoover can be pretty certainly counted on to put another rock-bound conservative into the supreme court every time he is 74; so the chances are that Mr. Hoover will have both their places to fill even if he serves but one term. If he runs as true to conservative form as he did in Charles Evans Hughes' case, this will leave only one surviving liberal—Justice Stone, who is not liberal enough to write home about.

The liberals are quite hopeful of what they may be able to do in congress in the next few years, but with a Tory supreme court finding all their liberal laws unconstitutional as fast as they pass them, they realize that they will be hampered considerably.

Still, there is this much balm in Gilead: Chief Justice Hughes cannot possibly be any more conservative than a Chief Justice Coolidge would have been.

"When he gets short he borrows of me and then forgets it. If I don't lend to him he abuses me and often strikes me. He has an insane temper when he is crossed and insists upon his own way always in everything. While he is sweet and agreeable outside, in his home he is dominating, selfish, mean spirited, most of the time."

"I think he still wants to leave me a look for someone else. My pride says, let him go, but fear of the future makes me hesitate. These are his children, his responsibilities, why should I assume all these cares while he goes free? What is there but loneliness for me after my children marry? I really might branch out in my profession even yet, but am so depressed that I can't find the ambition, also my health is miserable."

"What shall I do? Break up my home, try to work and forget? Perhaps go away? Or is there some way that you can suggest to bring him to his senses, and try to stick to the ship, make the best of a bad bargain?"

"The children stick together and are not in sympathy with either of us."

"In the first place, my dear Depressed, I would like to have you go to a 'competent physician,' as our doctor says, and have a thorough 'check-up,' another of her expressions. I would like to know how much of your miserable health is due to nerves and worry and how much to organic trouble. There is the latter condition you should be put on the road to physical health, and that will give you a different mental perspective. I your trouble is purely mental, a different environment and new interests will be best, and will help revive your ambition."

"I most certainly would not up my home nor my children were you. Both your girls need the little one won't be married for years yet, and when all of them are married they will still need motherly advice and love. Not much chance of loneliness there."

"Now about that career of yours. Did you demonstrate to your own satisfaction that you could be successful in it? Could you manage the house with help and dip in it again? Why not try it? It would give you a new interest in life. You would make me independent if you were successful, and would give me the proper perspective—make me realize what your husband and other men out in the world are against and what they need in the way of companionship. It may make you more sympathetic to your husband's state of mind and the reactions that make him irritable and mean spirited at home."

"He has arrived at the stage where he is no longer young, and I don't like it. It seems to me to smart clothes, the dancing lesson the craving for the flattery of young women, are all the defensive mechanism of a person who is trying desperately to hold on to youth. You and he quarrel over money, you have 'pulled strings' him to get him in his present position. You have 'given up a career for him.' Please don't be angry with me because I am on trying to visualize the situation from the picture your letter gave me. You haven't rather rubbed these things in, have you, dear? Haven't been the least bit in the world superior?"

"You two should be the greatest chums, but the friction of daily living—all the little natural pet cares and worries of a house as a family, and two people each asserting their individuality and yearning for love and understanding if themselves have come between."

"Try to see if you are in any way to blame, and go more than halfway. The children need both you, you both of them. I'd like to hear from you again, even if you do nothing more than scold me for altogether missing the point at giving the wrong advice."

"Well, dear friend, I am so depressed that I can't find the ambition, also my health is miserable. I feel all puffed up because you have done me the honor to mimic me. Through you I can see myself as others see me, and it's a rare treat. I tell you, no doubt, Humming Bird feels exactly the same way that I do."

"Who should the speaker be but Mr. Bumble Bee, himself! Hopping up on the stone on which Biff and Peter stood, the jolly chap led the cheering for the Hum Bug troupe."

"And now that you're here, Mr. Bumble Bee, why not do a hum and fly for us?"

Good natured as the day was long, Bumble Bee did as he was asked. The sun shone on his brown and yellow coat and the breeze took him up and he made a sound like music. Somehow the sound made Peter feel sleepy, but he did not close his eyes for fear of missing something. The boy thought to himself:

"Well as the Hum Bugs hum, Bumble Bee hums better. There's a comfortable note in his voice that makes a fellow feel happy!"

Diet and Health

Gains Instead of Losing

"Dear Doctor: After reading your article on the value of walking I smiled. I weighed 227 pounds three weeks ago, when I started walking 14 blocks to work, no less at any time since, and often as much as 42 blocks. My breakfast consists of two slices bread and one cup coffee (no sugar). Lunch one sandwich and coffee. A good evening meal. I have gained 10 pounds since I started walking. That's faster than I ever gained. I am 5 feet 3 inches, 33 years old. Do my own housework, work eight hours in an office, washing and ironing for three. Why did I gain my weight?"

"DISGUSTED."

You've gained your weight by eating more than you did before. D. That "good" evening meal was either larger or richer than it was before. You might as well tell me you threw a rock up in the air and it hung there, as to say you increased your weight solely by increasing your exercise! Fat comes from food and drink, and food and drink only, in excess of your needs for exercise and other physical activities, internal and external. So stop fooling yourself, dear Disgusted!

Have you our instructions on how to lose weight? You should have our pamphlet on the subject. We have wonderful reports from it. See column rules for obtaining this.

"Dear Doctor: Our drinking water is colored with iron, and we don't like it, so we have made a filter by using a ten-quart flower pot with a hole in the bottom; over this hole is a four-inch square of strainer screen such as is used to strain milk; on this we have about two inches of charcoal and then two or three inches of coarse sand; over this is a square of muslin with four stones to hold down the corners. This pot stands on two small cleat boards across a large jar. When the well water is poured through this it is clear and sparkling and tastes so much better. Is this all right?"

Rosenau says that home filters, even those that are designed by manufacturers, are good for turbid waters, either from dirt or iron, but they will not remove any harmful bacteria, so if there is any danger of contamination from such, the water should also be boiled. The filter you devised is a good one for its purpose, Mrs. L.

"Dear Doctor: Why is it necessary for me to take twice or three times the amount of laxative that I eat bread made of rye, bran, oat meal or dark bread of any kind, or cereal or rough food of any kind that is recommended for constipation? I can eat white bread with ill effects."

"MRS. J."

Perhaps this is due to the fact that your type of constipation is not due to lack of bulk, but to a irritated condition of your intestines, which the coarse foods make worse, Mrs. J. This type of constipation is covered in our article on Constipation and Mucous Colitis. See column rules for obtaining this.

Mrs. C. C.: We have an article on Headaches which may help you. Ask also for our pamphlet on the Hygiene of Women. See column rules.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: We have been married for nearly 24 years and have three children, son 20, daughters 16 and 10.

"I am naturally practical and always willing to make sacrifices for the common good. I make money—not much—but I always save some of it. My husband cannot save or deny himself of anything, is pleasure loving and a great flirt, dresses better than his son, spends money on private dancing lessons.

"Last winter he became infatuated with a young girl in his office and wanted me to divorce him so he could marry her. My pride was hurt and my spirit all but broken, as I have sacrificed a career for this man and have pulled every wire I could to help him rise to the position he now occupies. I saw the girl and became convinced that she was just fooling and had no intention of marrying him.

"She left the job and I don't believe he ever sees her now. But this has been very different between us since, as I realize he is not to be trusted and does not appreciate me. We quarrel about money, as he is not generous with me—gives me an allowance for the table, but nothing for myself.

"When he gets short he borrows of me and then forgets it. If I don't lend to him he abuses me and often strikes me. He has an insane temper when he is crossed and insists upon his own way always in everything. While he is sweet and agreeable outside, in his home he is dominating, selfish, mean spirited, most of the time."

"I think he still wants to leave me a look for someone else. My pride says, let him go, but fear of the future makes me hesitate. Poems that Live

OUT of the night that covers me, Black as the pit from pole to pole,

I thank whatever gods may be For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance I have not winced nor cried aloud.

Under the burthen of a chance My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears Looms but the Horror of the shade,

And yet the menace of the years Finds and shall find me unafraid.

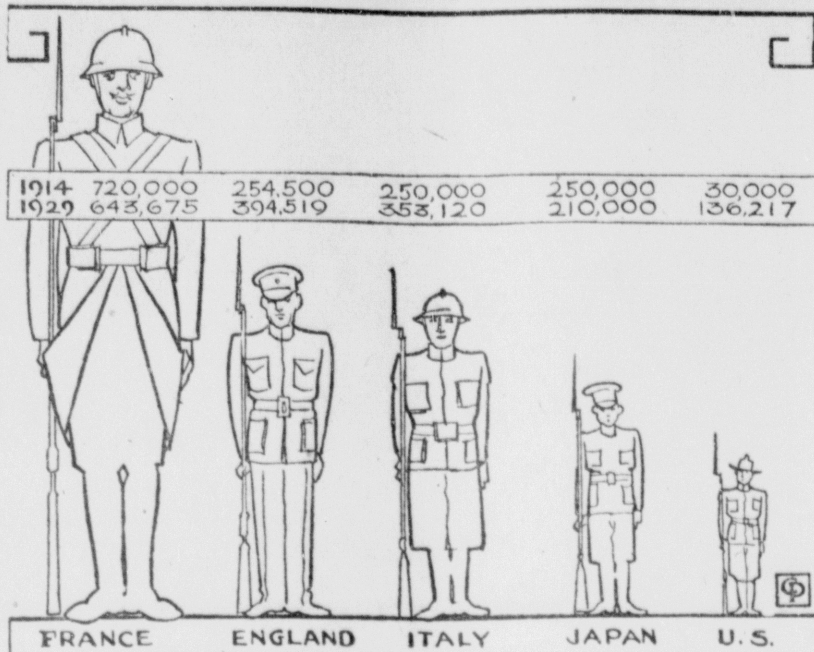

It matters not how straight the gate, How charged with punishments the scroll,

I am the master of my fate: I am the captain of my soul.

BRITISH PREMIER SEES ARMY CUT

An international disarmament conference aimed at reduction of land war forces is predicted by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain as the logical successor to the current five-power naval disarmament parley in London. Artist's sketch shows present size and pre-World war size of armies of five great powers participating in naval parley.

Farm Notes

WHAT ABOUT PROSO MILLET?

What about Proso millet, which is being advertised as a wonderful crop that produces enormous yields of grain of high feeding value, in answering the many inquiries concerning this crop, that come to the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, L. E. Thatcher, associate agronomist at the station, says Proso is not new.

It is variously known as Proso, hog millet, and broomcorn millet, and has been grown in Europe for centuries. In parts of Russia where the growing season is too short for the safe production of the common grain crops it is of considerable importance.

It has been tried in many places in the United States, Mr. Thatcher says, but has not succeeded in gaining a foothold except to a limited extent in the northwestern states, where it is grown as a catch crop when the usual grain crop fails.

FOR THE LOVE o' PAT

By C.L. WEBB © 1929

READ THIS FIRST: Herbert Maxwell, guardian of Patricia and Jimmy Blair, twins and heirs to a huge fortune, succeeds in making away with half of the estate through the substitution of a fake brother for Jimmy when the settlement is made at New York City, Jimmy, an aphasia victim, is being held prisoner by Maxwell, Lieutenant Rex Dallard, Dr. Frank Gordon, both in love with Pat, and Nurse Margery Lynne, attempt to frustrate the plot, but fail. Then, in a night club, the four friends stumble into the fake brother and Madame Leclerc, the woman who once held Pat captive in Paris at Maxwell's orders. The fake brother, doublecrossed by Maxwell, tells of the plot and declares he is now anxious to help Pat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

"But, don't you think, Rex?" inquired Pat, an anxious note in her voice, "that it would be best to wait until Maxwell turns Jimmy over to me before we make any move toward recovery of the securities?"

Before Dallard could reply to her question Dr. Gordon spoke.

"I believe we'd better tell Pat of our experience today, Rex," he said, "and of the opinion that we both hold regarding Maxwell's intentions. No use letting her lose a lot of time in vain expectation, especially now, since this young man has offered to right the wrong he did."

"You're right, Frank!" agreed the other at once, and turning to the girl, whose eyes had grown big with wonder at what this conversation might mean, he briefly and concisely related the story of the doctor's chance sight of Maxwell and Jimmy that day and of the taxicab chase of the maroon-colored car and its result.

"We decided, after returning from our fruitless run, that you had worried enough without the addition of that incident," he said in conclusion. Then, as a thought struck him he turned to Jean Bouchard.

"Do you happen to know, Bouchard?" he asked, "where Maxwell was going today with Miss Blair's brother?"

"All I know is what his chauffeur, Bill Munson, told me," replied Bouchard. "He said that Maxwell took Jimmy somewhere out near Mt. Vernon, in Westchester County. But, even the chauffeur can't tell any more than that, for Maxwell, he said, made him get out of the car when they reached Mt. Vernon and wait at a hotel there while he took the wheel and finished the trip by himself. Bill told me Maxwell was gone about an hour and when he got back to the hotel he was alone in the car. Jimmy was gone!"

"Oh, dear!" moaned Pat, her voice a wail of dismay. "Do you suppose it's possible that he could have?" She stopped. The very thought of what Maxwell might possibly have done with Jimmy was too awful to consider.

"I know he planned to put Jimmy in a sanitarium somewhere!" said Jean Bouchard quickly, as he noted the frown that darkened Patricia's brow at the cry from Pat. "I happened by accident to hear him telephoning yesterday from a hall phone in our apartment house, and he called the party 'Doctor' that he was talking to, and spoke of 'a quiet sanitarium where my boy can be away from the city's racket!'"

"That's what he's done, without a doubt—put Jimmy into some sanitarium!" opined Dr. Gordon in a tone that implied perfect confidence in the accuracy of his opinion. "There are several of which I know," he went on optimistically. "In and around Mt. Vernon, and a score, at least, scattered throughout Westchester County. It may require a week or so of diligent canvassing before we locate the one in which Jimmy is planted, but a patient search will reward us, I'm sure!"

"You have the right kind of medicine, Doctor Frank!" chirped the everhopeful Margery. "An ounce of optimism to drive away a case of worry is the best prescription any doctor can issue. Look at Pat—she's smiling now, her scars all gone!"

It was true. The smile, like the flash of the sun breaking through clouds in a storm-wracked sky had driven the fright from the girl's eyes. Madame Leclerc, whose chair rubbed arms with that of her one-time prisoner, reached over and patted her shoulder.

"Cheer up, my dear," she said with a smile that lent a wonderful charm to her handsome face. "We are going to help you find your brother. Herbert Maxwell is very cunning, a very tricky scoundrel, but without Jean Bouchard to help him he cannot hold the fortune he has stolen!"

"I most certainly hope you are right, Madame Leclerc," she said earnestly. "But I cannot help feeling skeptical when anyone speaks of defeating Herbert Maxwell's carefully planned schemes. For as long as I can remember I've heard him spoken of as a wizard and now, with my own experiences to warn me, I freely confess that I'm afraid of him!"

"He's a fox sure enough and as crooked as any corkscrew!" declared the "crooked" one's late assistant, the rasp of a grievance in his tones. "When Old Maxy wants something from you he's the grandest promoter in seventeen states! When you ask something from him, he's most likely to hand you a double-cross!"

"Has he handed you a 'double-cross' yet?" asked Dallard curiously.

"I'll say he did!" gritted the other, his nostrils quivering at the recollection of his wrongs. "He promised me one of the fourteen million my resemblance to Jimmy Blair enabled him to steal from his father, which he got. It was his or he turned over to the French police for a crime I didn't commit. After we had taken the Blair securities to the bank safely deposit vault I asked for my share and a box for myself. Did I get it? Huh! He never made any answer to my squawk. He just stowed the stuff—all in one box, for which he got the key. He told me he'd fix me up with a ten thousand dollar checking account. I protested. He laughed. When he opened the account for me upstairs he made a stipulation with the officials that twenty-five dollars a day must be the limit of my withdrawals. I had to accept or get nothing. His purpose, you see, was to keep me tied to him. It's just as I told him. He had the first 'double-cross' put on me; at the finish he'll double-cross me himself just as he's double-crossed the Blair twins. He'll make it a triple-cross—if he has his way!"

Rex Dallard and the Doctor laughed outright. Not so much at the clever trick of Maxwell as at the naïveté displayed by young Bouchard; his candid acknowledgment, virtually, that his grievance owed itself to Maxwell's double-crossing tactics. Margery smiled vaguely, but Pat's face indicated a big question in her mind. Madame Leclerc studied the countenance of the young man who had promised to

The Theater

Harry Langdon, the movie comedian, is said to be a clever cartoonist. Langdon and Benny Rubin are reported planning to collaborate on a cartoon strip for newspaper release. Benny to write the continuity and Langdon to do the drawings.

This fact brings to mind the fact that many talents are buried in Hollywood, while their possessors exercise their abilities in another way, because they can make money faster. Douglas Fairbanks Jr., for instance, is an adroit pen and ink sketcher and is scheduled to do a series of short articles for Vanity Fair, illustrated by himself.

John Barrymore's talent as a caricaturist is well-known and his brother, Lionel, the director, once forsook the stage for years, before his concentration on pictures, and devoted himself to painting.

Milton Sills used to bring miniature clay to the studio and fiddle in modelling between scenes. His wife, Doris Kenyon, professes writing and is the author of several books of poems. She also has a book of sketches coming out soon.

Naomi Childers also is a splendid sculptress, when she'll take the time to it. Carmelita Geraghty's avocation is clothes. She designs her own, many of Colleen Moore's and others of her friends. At one time she considered using this talent in business.

Will Rogers managed to find time for his newspaper, magazine and book writing, despite picture and other activities. It's fascinating to watch him do his daily newspaper hunt when working on a film. He'll take a few minutes off, gnaw on a pencil, blink into space and then scrawl his stuff all in a jiffy.

Gilbert Emory, is actor, playwright and scenarist and alternates between the three. Victor Schertzinger, the director, is a composer when he isn't mekaphoning. James Gleason writes plays, sketches and green stories even when he is busy playing in pictures. Tom Mix added forth as a scribbler for a time, but soon went back to his horse.

Billie Dove has never knocked on publication doors but she used to write her impressions of people and scenes in fragmentary style.

PADRE OF THE RAINS

Father Ricard, Now Ill, Predicts Weather On Basis Of Sun Spots.

SANTA CLARA, Cal., Feb. 15.—Unmoved by compliments or abuse, a stoop-shouldered little old peasant of French Provence with his weather instruments here gives western United States more accurate weather prophecies than any other agency.

Father Jerome Ricard, famous "padre of the rains," whose illness is causing serious uneasiness to his friends throughout the world, is a quaint and witty teacher and observer, far removed from the cold scientific type. During the last thirty years he has developed his method of predicting weather on the basis of sun spots to an almost exact science.

Sun Spots
Prior to 1900, he says, he knew less about sun spots than the office cat. When he began his work with sun spots and weather, most astronomers said he was a fool. Here is what is meant by the scientific observation of sun spots: The sun is divided into a north zone and a south zone. These zones are swept by storms which are caused by the position of other planets in relation to the sun. When two or three planets get into a certain position their magnetic powers draw in co-operation. This

GIRL MARRIED WHEN

DIVORCE HERE NOW

Charging gross neglect of duty, Lucy Upton has brought suit in Common Pleas Court by her father, James Parker, for divorce from Orville Upton, whom she married when she was but 14 years old. According to the petition, the girl was born April 8, 1913 and she married Upton July 1, 1927. No children were born of the union. The petition sets forth the girl was married without her parents' consent and that her husband has never provided her with a home or other support. The plaintiff wants the marriage annulled.

Bert E. Espey has filed suit for divorce from Oma Wilson Espey, on grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years. They were married at Dayton in December, 1924. No children were born of the marriage. The plaintiff claims his wife left his home March 18, 1925, only several months after their marriage, and that she has remained away ever since. The husband asserts he does not know where she is.

FORD WILL BUILD SCHOOLS

Motor Magnate Plans To Devote Rest Of His Life To Education, He Says

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1930, By I. N. S.)
PORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 15.—Henry Ford plans to dedicate the rest of his life to education. He intends to build a number of schools in various parts of the country—how many he does not yet know—but some of them will be very large institutions. He said today he "would not be surprised" if he invested one hundred million dollars in the project.

"I want to do all in my power to help young men of America to fit themselves into the world," said Mr. Ford. "Society owes it to the young people to educate them for useful citizenship and, for my part, I am going to devote the rest of my active days in the interest of trade schools and teaching."

"I intend to invest my money in my own way. I have a definite plan. Consequently I do not wish to be bothered by suggestions from persons who never made or saved a dollar, telling me how to spend a million. The schools will be strategically located throughout the country. I am not yet prepared to say where they will be situated. But our school, the Edison Institute of Technology at Dearborn, Mich., will be the principal school, the nucleus of the other educational institutions."

"Every boy should learn a trade. He should have something to fall back on, something to keep him out of trouble. I believe there should be a technical school in every industrial institution."

"When students come out of school, at 18 or so, people should want them. They should be in demand and not find themselves shifting aimlessly without a definite purpose in life."

"The reason we have so much crime and racketeering is because schools do not teach our young men how to fit into the world."

"Racketeering is nothing but a revolt against the present improper and ineffectual system of teaching. If taught properly every boy upon leaving school could go to an employer and say he was specifically fitted to perform a given task. Now they say, 'I went through high school' or 'I went through college.' That does not mean anything. But if they said they are a machinthe purpose of acquiring money, he asserted. "Money in itself is nothing," he said. "It is merely a medium of exchange, an understanding between each and every one. Its real value lies in what it enables you to do for others."

"All classes have more money than they did formerly. Things are different in every way. More men have control of money who know how to use it than ever before."

"I don't say they are richer. I say they have more money. To be richer you must use money in the right way."

"I know in my own case I have no right to squander money and that I must use it for the good of the general public. I can think of no better way of using my money than in the cause of teaching. From the day I made my first car until today I have had to teach and I intend to go on teaching until the end of my days. I see no better way to be of service to humanity."
